

ABSTRACT

A system and method are described for filtering unwanted email messages. One embodiment of the filtering method comprises defining a plurality of disposable email addresses, wherein each of the disposable email addresses is associated with a different Website and/or individual; and in response to detecting a particular Website being visited by an end user, automatically providing the user with one or more disposable email address options from which to select.